MONONGALIA COUNTY SCHOOLS DIVERSITY, EQUITY AND INCLUSION NEWSLETTER

“EVERYBODY IS WELCOME HERE”

Monongalia County celebrates a new school year with the theme “Everybody is Welcome Here”

Monongalia County Schools is committed to providing a mutually respectful educational environment that is welcoming to all individuals from diverse backgrounds that promotes individual development, intellectual growth, and responsible citizenship.

The Monongalia County Schools Diversity, Equity and Inclusion committee will continue to celebrate themes throughout the year to promote the teaching and observation of different cultures throughout the year.

September’s theme is “Everybody is Welcome Here.” The focus of “Everybody is Welcome Here” is to create an environment where all of our students feel welcomed in Monongalia County Schools for who they are as individuals.

Coming back to start a brand new school year we want to make sure that our students and families feel that they are welcomed in our buildings.

Monongalia County is made up of many different cultures. We have students and families from all over the world. It is important that we are educating and giving students the opportunity to learn about different cultures as well as teaching about their own.

We will spend this month learning about how we are all part of Monongalia county schools, but we all have our own unique culture that we come from. As a school system we want to show that all cultures and backgrounds are welcomed in our school system.

September Observations

- Hispanic Heritage Month-Sept. 15-Oct. 15

GUARDIAN CORNER

A YEAR IN REVIEW

Guardian Corner

The guardian corner is optional reading for parents that are looking for additional resources or ideas at home. Monongalia county schools are providing optional resources and respect everyone’s differences.

The theme, “Everybody is welcome here” teaches our students about acceptance of others.

Acceptance is not something that we should talk or discuss with our kids every once in a while. It is something that should be a part of our daily discussions with our kids.

Having daily discussions can help our children understand and appreciate differences. It will help encourage respect for others and developing a deeper understanding of self.

Penn State University created an inclusivity toolkit to help parents teach their kids about Acceptance. Here is the link (Inclusivity \(psu.edu\)) Some general tips from the toolkit are:

- Be a good example- The first step for effective teaching is being a good example. Demonstrate respect and consideration for all—regardless of their difference. Take moments throughout the day to find teachable moments and conversations with your child.
- Be available- Make time for discussion and meaningful dialog with your child. When questions arise, be prepared to put other issues aside and show genuine interest in their thoughts and experiences. Always be available for more discussion. This will communicate that it is okay to notice and discuss anything, so long as it is done with respect.
- Be prepared- Whether you are a parent, grandparent, teacher or caregiver of any kind, it is a good idea to think about diversity issues in advance so you are neither surprised, nor embarrassed and can respond to sensitive topics with care and confidence.
- Be age appropriate- At an early age, children can be reminded that people are different in many ways. It is rare to find two people who look, sound, or act alike.

“We are all people, and our differences are normal. Look at the children in your school. They are all children, going to school together, but do any of them look like you, or like exactly the same things that you like?”

- Help broaden their social circle- Try and find ways to give your teen opportunities to participate in extra-curricular, community and volunteer activities that may bring them into contact with people outside of their regular group of friends. Not only can this help with opportunities for more diversity, but this can help with the feeling to conform if they have different social groups.

- Monitor media- Technology is a big part of our everyday lives and even a bigger part of a teenager’s life. While parents generally spend less time overseeing a teens media use, it is still important to occasionally monitor what they are doing and watching.

These days kids are being flooded with different amounts of information through these different media platforms that may be different from your own thoughts and views. Being aware of what your teenager is doing can help with promoting acceptance.

How to get involved

If you are interested in more information or being part of the Parent Diversity, Equity and Inclusion committee please fill out the form below.

Last Year at Suncrest Middle

Last year was a grand step back toward normalcy for Suncrest Middle School. Last May 6th, 7th, and 8th grades celebrated the end of the 2021-2022 school year with bowling trips, field day adventures, movies, and park visits.

8th grade Awards were held in the gymnasium for the first time since May 2019 and honored students graduating from Suncrest Middle School, while younger grades watched their older classmates from their homerooms. Several outstanding students were recognized specially for academic excellence, compassion and kindness, and their leadership amongst peers. The recipients of these awards, given annually, were as follows: The Most Outstanding 8th Graders awards went to both Addison Smith and Solas Chhin-Kreiner, the Bernard Summers Award went to Ella Kupec and Sanketh Guppi, the Jennifer Huber Award went to both Mahnoor Jafri and Ryan Price, the William Ryan Award went to Victoria Summers-Thrush and Shae Lingo, the Christopher Gais Award went to Kaden Tolliver and Isabella Sanchez, and finally, the Jim Napollio Award was awarded to Karla Pineda and Keltin Blunt. Suncrest Middle School will miss these young leaders in the community and wish them and all of the 8th grade graduating class nothing but the best on their next adventures.

But the greatest send off and celebration of the year came with the 8th grade dance. Again, this was the first dance since the covid lockdown March of 2020. Balloons and streamers and a blaring DJ under a large tent welcomed the 8th grade graduating class in their dresses and suits, who danced the night away.

Suncrest Middle looking forward...

Suncrest Middle School has started the year running with a newly structured class schedule for students and an advisory class, which informs students how to become more aware of their world and be a leader in that world. Thad Turner, WVU alum, Navy Seal, arrived the first day doors opened to talk to the students about leadership. Additional guest speakers will visit Suncrest Middle School throughout the year to talk on building relationships/anti-bullying, resiliency, helping others, problem solving and positive change.

How parents can get involved.....

Parents can get involved in this coming September by supporting the library through the Book Fair, which kicks off September 2 through September 12, 2022. Teachers will be creating wish lists for books they hope to add to their personal libraries, or update tattered books, or acquire class sets for their classroom for the 2022-2023 school year. Parents who wish to support the school could look at and purchase from these lists to help their child's teacher and the learning that happens in their child's classroom.

Hispanic Heritage Month begins in September and extends for one month to October 15th. For those parents who wish to celebrate, explore, or learn more about Hispanic Culture you may learn more here by following this link to the National Hispanic Heritage Month site.
